FLIGHT GROUP ALPHA

At the battle of Yavin Rebel terrorists, aided by spies and traitors within the Empire, struck a cowardly blow at the new symbol of Imperial power... The Death Star!

Darth Vader brought swift justice to the Rebels by destroying their main base on Hoth. The pitiful remnants of the Alliance have now scattered to the Outer Rim.

In the days ahead, the Emperor will call upon the Imperial Navy to eradicate the last vestiges of rebellion and restore law and order to the galaxy!

"The Empire is on the verge of success. Soon, peace and order will be restored throughout the galaxy. Even now, our capable forces, led by Darth Vader, are striking back at the Rebel insurgents."

Campaign Basics

Players are pilots in Flight Group Alpha, a small group of Academy pilots of the Imperial Navy. Having had their flight training completed on Imperial Star Destroyer Vengeance, the flight group pilots starts out at PS 1 with 0 XP banked, flying fragile TIE Fighters. As the pilots gains experience, and succeeds the missions, the flight group will be assigned to fly different Imperial Fighters attached to different squadrons.

The campaign starts just after the Empire's successful attack on the Echo Base on Hoth. Throughout the campaign, Flight Group Alpha will meet resistance from Rebels, Scum and even other Imperial ships.

Players are required to be very familiar with Josh Derksen's Heroes of the Aturi Cluster, since resources and concepts are used throughout this book. In fact, only the rules that are changed or added are listed in this book.

Flight Group explained
From Wookiepedia: "A flight or flight group was a grouping of three, four or five starfighters, depending on the military, that was typically though not always led by a captain. Three flights of four starfighters, or four flights of three starfighters, typically made up a squadron. "

New Tokens

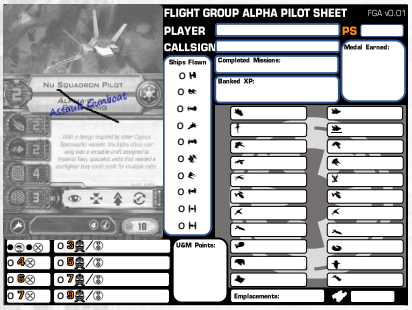

You need a new or different token to indicate when AI's enter flee mode, a Flee Token. You can pick any token you like, either the unused Proof of Purchase tokens from your X-wing packs or other small tokens from some other FFG game.

You also need a token to represent Formation flying, a Formation Token.

You need to print a number of new components to be able to play this game:

Ship AI Statcards, p17

The Pilot Sheet, p07
Flight Group Alpha pilots have 1 sheet that is used throughtout this campaign. That sheet, together with a pilot card of the ship used in a specific mission, forms the total sheet used for that mission.

Flight Group Alpha Pilot Sheet

For Flight Group Alpha, you have one pilot sheet where you track all progress. Whenever you fly a ship you should bring the pilot with the lowest Pilot Skill to the table as well. For each ship, these are:

TIE Fighter: Academy Pilot
TIE interceptor: Alpha Squadron Pilot
TIE Bomber: Scimitar Squadron Pilot
TIE Advanced: Tempest Squadron Pilot.
Alpha-Class Star wing: Nu Squadron Pilot
TIE Defender: Delta Squadron Pilot

…and so on.

The combination of the upgrades on that pilot, and the ones unlocked on your Pilot Scoresheet is the total of upgrades available for your ship and mission.

1. Player and Callsign name fields.
2. Current Pilot Skill level. For pilots straight out from the Academy, this will be 1.
3. Mission Count. Here you keep tally of all completed missions flown.
4. Banked XP: Keep track of all XP that have not been used for levelling up the PS, spent on Talents or used for U&M points.
5. As you increase your Pilot Skills, you will unlock new slots of both Talents and Modifications for any ship you fly. Mark these by filling in the "o"'s. All ships in the X-wing game have 2 upgrade slots that are not shown on any pilot card, a Title and a Modification. These are shown here for completion.
6. U&M Point Count. This is your number of points available for you to acquire upgrades for a new mission.
7. Here you can keep track of kills by enemy ship type. Please note that some ships can be found in both the Scum and Rebel column.
8. Here you can keep track of which ships you have flown. Mark these by filling in the "o"'s.
9. As you finish campaign, you will earn medals. Keep track of them here.

During the Combat Phase, each turn:
Deal at least 1 damage to 1 or more enemy ships	1 XP
During the Combat Phase, each turn:
… destroy any enemy ship or enemy emplacement	+1 XP
… and the ship is a non- and non- small ship	+1 XP
… and the ship is Large (, , etc)	+2 XP

Earning Experience Points

Teamwork is essential to succeed in Flight Group Alpha. Many times the group flies fragile ships and has to team up on an opponent to be able to destroy them. At the same time, the Imperial Navy is unforgiving, using the Flight Group as a tool that are easily replaceable.

All Experience Points in Flight Group Alpha are shared within the group, and each pilot gets its share.

Flight Group Pool

Every Experience Point Flight Group Alpha earns goes to the Flight Group Pool.

A pilot can earn up to 1 XP each turn for damaging an enemy ship. In addition, it can earn extra XP for destroying either ships or emplacements. After the total amount of XP for these sources has been calculated, add them to the Flight Group Pool. Friendly ships not from Flight Group Alpha will never add Experience Points from damaging or destroying ships.

Most other sources of XP are directly added to the Flight Group Pool. These include XP for destroying elite ships (one XP per player), Assists and Primary and Bonus Objectives.

Friendly ships, both those that the players control but are not from Flight Group Alpha, and AI controlled, may help in fulfilling Primary and/or Bonus Objectives.

Flight Group Pool Cup

One way of keeping track of XP earned during a mission is to have each player place beads into a cup each time they earn XP from damaging and destroying ships according to the table above. Then, at the end of a turn, the player together places XP for any destroyed elite ships, any Assists, and Primary or Bonus objectives fulfilled during the turn. At the end of the mission, divide the XP equally among the players.

"Secret mission objective completed, the Emperor will be pleased!"
- Cloaked Figure, Star Wars: TIE Fighter

Spending Experience Points

Player can only spend XP outside the Campaign Round (see page 21). Experience Points can be spent in difference ways:

- Upgrade and Modifications
- Increase Pilot Skill
- Elite Talents
- Imperial Pilot Abilities

Purchasing Upgrades and Modifications:
XP Cost = 1 U&M Point per XP

The Imperial Armory is vast and their resources almost limitless. But unlike Rebels, the pilots of Flight Group Alpha neither own their ships nor the upgrades installed. Instead, a pilot invests in Upgrades and Modification points (U&M Points), which has the same value as a Squad point. For example, a pilot with 30 U&M points will be able to acquire upgrades for a total of 30 points from the armory for each mission.
The following upgrades can be acquired for U&M points: .
U&M Points cannot be converted back to XP in any way. U&M Points will decrease if any upgrade is destroyed due to ejected or shot down.

Example: Shelly will be flying a TIE Advanced and has 10 U&M points to spend. She has PS 4, which means she has unlocked an additional Modification slot. She can acquire Upgrades from the following slots for this ship: . She selects Cluster Missiles (4), and 2 Hull Upgrades (2*3), totaling 10 U&M points for this mission.

Increase Pilot Skill:
XP Cost = New Pilot Skill Level x2

Pilot skills determines how many upgrades a pilot may purchase on any given ship. Since enemy PS is scaled towards the average PS for Flight Group Alpha, the higher the PS, they more difficult the resistance will be.

Must be purchased one level at a time.
XP Cost examples:
PS2 to PS3 will cost (3x2) = 6XP.
PS3 to PS4 will cost (4x2) = 8XP.

Each increase in pilot skill comes with an additional benefit: You gain an additional Elite Pilot Talent icon at Pilot Skill levels 3,5,7, and 9, and an additional ship modification icon at Pilot Skill 4, 6, and 8. Note that Veteran Instincts or Adaptability does not increase your Pilot Skill for this purpose.

Limitations

All upgrades, including Elite Talents and Imperial Pilot Abilities are considered Limited for the Campaign; a ship may only purchase each upgrade once. Secondary Weapons, Bombs and Hull/Shield Upgrades are excepted.

Extra Munitions:
For the purposes of the campaign, this card is a Modification.

Titles:
Titles are purchased as any other upgrade, with U&M points. The rules apply as stated on card. For example, Royal Guard Title can only be purchased (at 0 cost) if pilot has PS 4 or more.

Purchasing Elite Talents
XP Cost = Squad Point Cost x2

When you reach Pilot Skill 3, your ship gains an Elite Pilot Talent slot . They are generally better than other upgrades, and you are less likely to lose Elite Pilot Talents when suffering Eject penalties.

Purchasing Imperial Pilot Abilities
XP Cost = Pilot Skill of Original Owner

The pilot abilities of existing Imperial pilots () may be purchased and equipped as if they were Elite Pilot Talents. However, most of them cannot be purchased until your pilot is very experienced.

Your pilot skill must be greater than or equal to the Pilot Skill of the Imperial Pilot whose ability you wish to purchase. The cost is equal to the PS column, below:

No Escape!

Unless stated in a mission, Imperial Pilots have standing orders not to flee. Should a ship leave from the board, even in Friendly Space, the ship is destroyed and you need to make an ejection roll.

Imperial ships are only allowed to leave the board through mission specific escape routes, as stated in the primary objectives.

(Almost) No hyperdrive!

Most Imperial ships do not have a hyperdrive installed. Unless explicitly stated in mission objectives, Imperial pilots may not use the hyperdrive anyway even if it has one. Unlawful use of a hyperdrive counts as that the ship is destroyed, and you need to make an ejection roll.

Imperials have the initiative

In Flight Group Alpha, the Imperial side have the initiative. If an Imperial Pilot has the same PS as an enemy, it will move first and shoot first. This is a drawback, since the enemy AI will move in response to where the imperial ships are after their move, not before! This represents the general lack of skill among the newly recruited pilots, who are viewed within the Navy as expendable cannon fodder. Once the pilots have proven themselves however, they will be able to increase their pilot skill and move after the bulk of the enemy ships.

Player Formation Flying

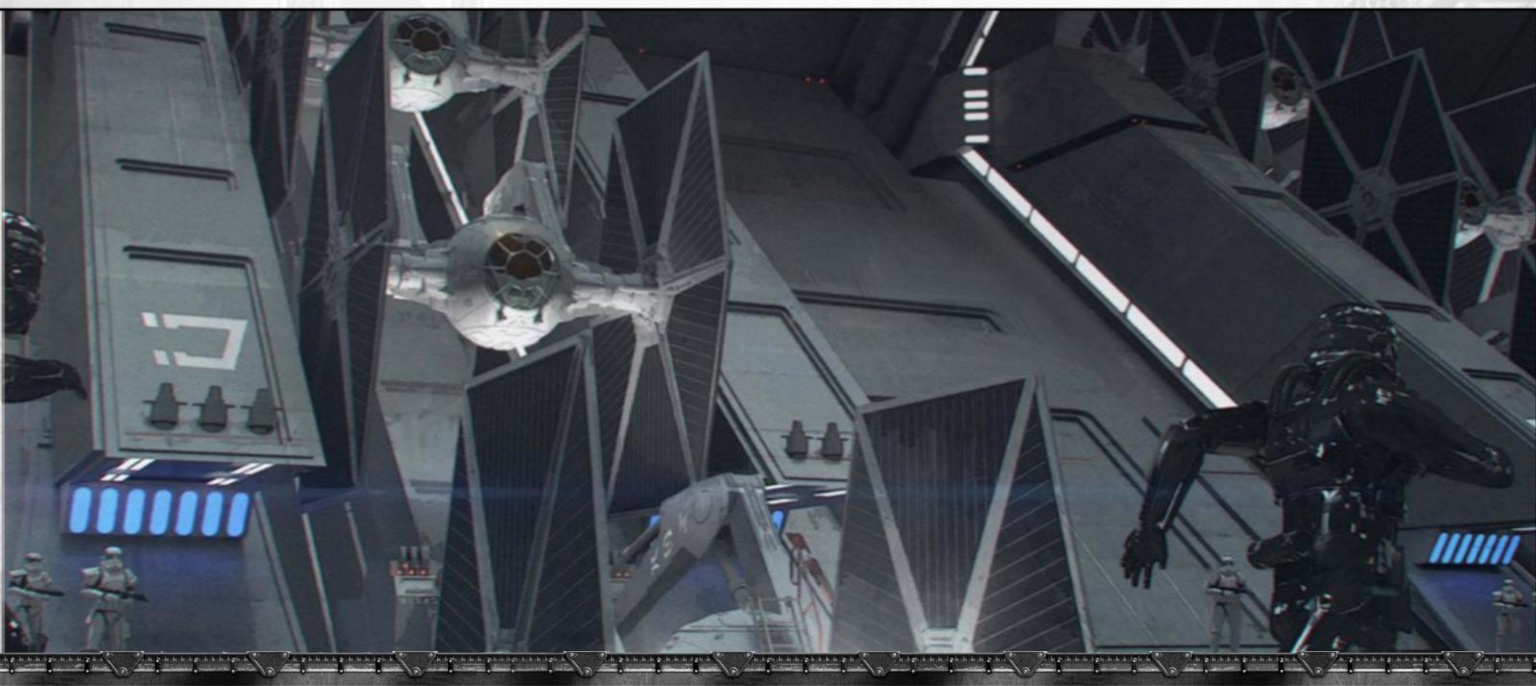

For each mission, the player with the highest Pilot Skill is assigned the Title Alpha One. Other ships in Flight Group Alpha may decide to fly in formation with Alpha One during setup phase. This type of flying has 2 limitations:

- Formation flying can only be performed by ships that has the same type as the on Alpha One is flying.
- Only 3 other ships may at any point fly in formation with Alpha One.

Benefits

Flying in formation with Alpha One has 3 main benefits:

- Ships in a formation activates at the same time (with same Pilot Skill) as Alpha One.
- Ship in formation attacks at the same time (with same Pilot Skill) as Alpha One.
- Various talents and Imperial Pilot Abilities, such as Swarm Tactics, Swarm Leader, and Howl Runners ability works perfectly together with ships flying in formation.

Setup for Player Formation flying

Setup:
Setting up the formation is identical as AI formation setup, where Alpha One is assigned the lowest values (and thus will be to the left and will always activate first). Other players collectively decides where they will be places in the formation, and in what order they will thus activate and perform attacks. This order will stay the same until a ship breaks off from the formation.
Assign a Formation token to each of these ships.

Breaking Formation

Ships can loose its Formation Token due for different reasons:

The pilot decides to break formation in Planning Phase (by removing the Formation Token)

The pilot actively or are forced to perform a different action than Alpha One, leaving the ship in a position where it is either beyond Range 1 or not facing the same direction. This can happen if Alpha One has for example performed a Boost action to the with flank left while the pilot performs it straight ahead.

The pilot collides with a ship or other obstacle.

A ship who has broken formation cannot re-enter the formation for the duration of the mission.

Other Formation related notes

If a stressed ship is in formation with Alpha One and Alpha One performs a red maneuver, the stressed ship will perform a white 2 forward instead. This will most probably cause the ship to loose its Formation token in the Combat Phase, however.

Taking damage does not cause a ship to break player formation.

The AI swerving mechanic is never used in Player Formation flying.

Order of Gameplay for Player Formation flying

Planning Phase:
- Alpha One decides what maneuver to pick on his/her dial.

For each ship with a Formation token, check that:

- The ship needs to be at Range 1 of Alpha One or another ship with a Formation token.
- It needs to face the same direction as Alpha One.

If these criteria are not met remove Formation token.

Then, each pilot with a Formation token may look at Alpha One's dial and decide whether to remove its Formation token.

Ships without a Formation token may now pick a maneuver using its own dial.

Activation Phase:
All ships with a Formation token activates using Alpha One's Pilot Skill:

- Alpha One always moves and choses action first.
- Then, in the correct order (see above) each other ship in the formation will activate and will perform its maneuver. (Note that swerving mechanic is NOT applied here). Then, he/she may select an action independently from Alpha One.

Combat Phase:
Check that each ship is still in formation. The following criteria must be met:
- The ship needs to be at Range 1 of Alpha One or another ship in the formation
- It needs to face the same direction as Alpha One.

If these conditions are met, the ship is still in formation and may perform an attack (if possible) using Alpha One's Pilot Skill.

If these criteria are not met remove Formation token. The ship performs an attack (if possible) using its own Pilot Skill.

Each ship with a Formation token decides their own target of the attack in the predefined order.

End Phase:
Proceed as normal.

Assisting with an Action

In Flight Group Alpha you may, if you are within Range 1 with another ship in your flight group, assign your action to that ship. This will in some cases render an Experience Point to the Flight Group Pool.

If that action is used to prevent the ship from being damaged otherwise, add 1 XP to the Flight Group Pool.

An example of this could be to spend a assist Focus or Evade token to prevent it from taking damage from an attack.

If that action is used to cause a ship to become damaged, where it otherwise wouldn't, add 1 XP to the Flight Group Pool.

An example of this could be that using a assist Target Lock to reroll dice, that in turn results in damage, where not rerolling them wouldn't.

Actions that can be assigned to other ships are: Target Lock, Evade, Focus, Barrel Roll and Boost.

Note: Trading tokens within the group, such as systematically giving a Evade Token to a ship and that ship gives a Evade Token back to maximize the chance of getting these assist XP's should be considered cheating.

Here the AI statcards for enemy ships in Flight Group Alpha are explained.

Rebel and Scum AI Ship Statcards

1) Ship Icon and name

2) Pilot Skill and Squadron Name. Many ships have 2 different Squadron variants. Each have different PS and name.

3) Faction Icon

4) Flee Mechanic. See description below.

5) Additional Upgrades. Any additional Upgrades a ship has are listed on the card.

6) AI for the ship's maneuver.

Flee Mechanic

Enemy ships enter flee mode when Health (Hull + Shields) is below a certain value, as stated at the bottom of the Ship AI card. Put a Flee token (see p5) on the ship. In the following round, it will perform these steps:

1) If facing edge at Range 2, move at fastest possible speed to edge or:

2) Roll a die to perform a maneuver as stated at the bottom of the ship AI card. Assign a Hyperdrive token to the ship.

3) Perform a action.

4) When ship activates during the Combat phase, it will not attack but instead make a hyperspace roll to Jump to Hyperspace.

AI Ships in flee mode will attempt to swerve obstacles with another green maneuver, if possible.

Any AI ship that enters flee mode after it has performed an action during a turn will not try to do a hyperspace jump during the Combat phase. Instead, it will attack as normal (if possible).

AI Squadrons:

As the Imperial Pilot Skill of the Flight Group increases the skill of the squads you face will also increase. A mission where ❂PS is 5 or less will meet Cartel Marauders in Kihraxz Fighters, while ❂PS 6+ will meet Black Sun Aces instead.

Note that Light Scyk and Heavy Scyk have different PS, icon and Ship AIs. Only the Heavy Scyk have Elite Pilot Cards.

Rebel Ships:

Ship Type	❂PS	Use Squadron:	With PS
A-Wing	1-3	Prototype	1

Elite Pilots:

The AI Elite all start with the higher level squadron upgrades and action selections of the same ship type. Where there is a conflict such as an astromech, salvaged astromech or secondary weapon type, use the ones stated on the elite card.

Elite Pilot Cards

1) Ship Type and Name

2) Upgrades for "basic" elite variant

3) Pilot Skill rating for basic elite variant

4) If Imperial Pilot Skill (PS) of Flight Group Alpha is higher, it will encounter an even more experienced elite enemy. In this case, if PS is 6+, the opponent will have PS 6 and an additional ability. If Flight Group Alpha has PS 10 or more, it will encounter a Protectorate Starfighter with Autothrusters, Push the Limit, Old Teroch's Ability, Opportunist and Dengars ability with PS 10.

Variants to make playing different

Player who find missions with the TIE Fighter being too difficult due to their fragility, may choose to fly TIE Fighter FO instead. Doing this cause a mix up of ships from different eras, but opens up for the Tech Modification slot, gets a better maneuver dial and one Shield.

Another variant is to let each player buy Imperial Pilot Abilities regardless of own Pilot Skill. This allows players to have access to powerful abilities earlier in the campaign. They will still cost the same amount of XP however. (A PS 9 Ability still costs 9 XP to buy.)

Yet another variant is to restrict Imperial Pilot Abilities to ships that the pilot has flown. For example, a pilot with Interceptor experience but no Defender experience may pick Abilities from TIE Interceptor pilots, but not TIE Defender pilots.

The Campaign Round

1) Assign Alpha One
2) Calculate Imperial Pilot Skill
3) Mission Selection Phase
4) Mission Setup Phase
5) Select Upgrades using U&M Points
6) Play Mission Phase
7) Upkeep Phase

1. Assign Alpha One

The player with the highest Pilot Skill is assigned the leader of Flight Group Alpha. If there is a tie the players decide who becomes the leader.

The player automatically receives the Alpha One Upgrade that does not use the Title slot for that players ship.

2. Calculate Imperial Pilot Skill (PS)

Take the average (round down) of each pilots PS . This is the Imperial Pilot skill for this mission.

3. Mission Selection Phase

Alpha One checks the requirements for the tours of duty on page 25 and what missions are available to play. The players collectively decide what mission to play.

4. Mission Setup Phase

Set up the mission, and check enemies and select AI's on page 16 based on the Imperial Pilot Skill. Also check which ship the player will be assigned for this mission. Hand out a ship card by consulting the following table:

TIE Fighter: Academy Pilot
TIE interceptor: Alpha Squadron Pilot
TIE Bomber: Scimitar Squadron Pilot
TIE Advanced: Tempest Squadron Pilot.
Alpha-Class Star wing: Nu Squadron Pilot
TIE Defender: Delta Squadron Pilot

This card, combined with the Pilot Sheet, is used for the mission

5. Select Upgrades using U&M Points

Now it is time to acquire Upgrades from the Imperial Armory. Consult the Ship card and the Pilot Sheet. You may acquire assets for your total number of U&M Points. Certain missions will let you acquire some upgrades for "free", or grants you more U&M Points to spend.

Example: Shelly will be flying a TIE Advanced and has 10 U&M Points to spend. She has PS 4, which means she has unlocked an additional Modification slot. She can acquire Upgrades from the following slots for this ship: . She selects Cluster Missiles (4), and 2 Hull Upgrades (2*3), totaling 10 U&M Points for this mission.

6. Play Mission Phase

Each player decides if he/she wants to deploy in formation with Alpha One. Up to 3 other ships of the same ship type can be attached to Alpha One in this way. Make sure to track XP and kills, as well as what Objectives were fulfilled.

7. Upkeep Phase

Calculate XP received for each ship in the Flight Group. Any ship that has either fled (even though the Empire does not allow if) been destroyed rolls an ejection roll. The result can affect gained XP for the mission. All XP received are added to the Banked XP on the Pilot Sheet. Then, any penalties due to failing a mission are applied on the Pilot Sheet.

Spending XP can only be done between missions.

Bulk Freighter

PS 0 | 0 | 0 | 8 | 4

The BFF-1 Bulk Freighters are in this Ruleset represented as Large Based Ships. You can represent these ships with any Large based ships you may have on the table. The all have Pilot Skill 0 and are considered Neutral ships unless stated in mission specific rules. With 8 Hull and 4 Shields it can take a beating but with 0 attack die and 0 defense die it is obvious it is not built for combat.

- Can only move 1 ↑
- Considered Large Base Ship
- Count ✲ taken as ✷✷
- Only gain XP for damaging or destroying Bulk Freighters from mission special rules
- If a freighters final position overlaps with a small or large ship, the small or large ship is immediately destroyed. Then, roll one attack die for each small ship and two dice for each large ship, and Freighter suffers any Hits or Critical Hits rolled.

Sensor Beacon

3 | 2 | 0

- Count ✲ taken as ✷✷
- Considered an Emplacement
- Not obstructed by asteroid if they are placed on one.
- Equipped with Sensor Jammer:

"When defending, change one of the attacker's ✷ result to an 👁 result. The attacker cannot reroll the die with the changed result."

Automatic Defense Platform

PS 9 | 4 | 3 | 2 | 0

- Attacks as having PS 9
- Attacks at Range 1 only
- Always attacks the nearest enemy.
- Only gain XP for platforms from mission special rules
- Count ✲ taken as ✷✷
- Counts as asteroids for AI swerving and collision damage
- Any collision damage caused by the platform is taken by the platform as well

Cargo Container

1 | 3 | 0

- Count ✲ taken as ✷✷
- Count as asteroid for AI swerving and collision damage
- Any collision damage caused by the container is taken by the container as well.
- Only gain XP for containers from mission special rules

Mission Territory Type

Each mission has 3 territory types, Friendly, Neutral and Hostile. Imperial Navy are never allowed to flee, only to retreat if allowed by special mission rules.

Effect	Friendly Territory	Neutral Territory	Hostile Terrritory
Eject Roll	1 attack die	2 attack dice	3 attack dice
Escaping	Not allowed. Roll Eject Roll	Not allowed. Roll Eject Roll	Not allowed. Roll Eject Roll
Hyperdrive use	Not allowed. Roll Eject Roll	Not allowed. Roll Eject Roll	Not allowed. Roll Eject Roll
Mission End	Imperials pacify the area	Imperials pacify the area	Imperials pacify the area

Ejecting

Roll on the number of attack dice for the specific Territory. Then consult the table to the right. The results are cumulative. Rolling a hit and a focus cause you to lose both an upgrade and half of the XP received during the mission.

Escaping

Imperials are not allowed to flee unless being specifically ordered to. Escaping through any edge of the map will result ship being destroyed. Make an ejection roll.

Hyperdrive use.

Most Imperial ships in this campaign does not have a hyperdrive at all. As for the ships that are currently possible to fly in Flight Group Alpha, only the Assault Gunboat has it installed and can perform the Jump to Hyperspace maneuver. Even so, using the hyperdrive without permission is not allowed. Roll an Eject Roll if this happens.

Mission End

The Imperial Navy is the strongest in the galaxy. Unless mission specific rules says otherwise, the Imperials will eventually take control of the area. This means that even in Hostile territory any ship from Flight Group Alpha that survives until the end of the last turn will survive the mission.

Eject Results
💥💥	Pilot Killed – start a new pilot
💥	Lose most expensive Imperial Pilot Ability (🪖) or Elite Pilot Talent (Ⓔ)
✸	Lose U&M points equal to most expensive Upgrade equipped

"MISSION ABORTED, MISSION A FAILURE!"
- IMPERIAL FLIGHT OFFICER, STAR WARS: TIE FIGHTER

The Medal of Redemption

Pilots that have survived and completed the final mission of the first Tour of Duty, Aftermath of Hoth, are awarded the Medal of Redemption. This medal has the same benefit as the Cool Hand. Medals are equipped for free and does not use a player's slot.

The Medal of Unity

Pilots that have survived and completed the final mission of the second Tour of Duty, The Sepan Civil War, are awarded the Medal of Unity. This medal has the same benefit as the Calculation. Medals are equipped for free and does not use a player's slot.

Tours of Duty

Flight Group Alpha campaign play revolves around playing tours of duty. As long as the requirements under each tour description below is fulfilled, they may switch back and forth between the tours. The players collectively decides what mission they want to play, but have to keep track on how far they have progressed on each tour.

Check the Imperial Victory and Scum/Rebel Victory text on each mission for more information on the outcome of each mission.

Failing critical missions may result in decrease of Pilot Skill for pilots. If the ❂PS is so low that it prevents playing missions in any tour, Flight Group Alpha may decide to play the introductory mission again to try to gain experience. Failing critical missions can also mean that Flight Group Alpha fails the entire tour.

If Flight Group Alpha fails critical missions on all available tours, they have failed the campaign.

Example 1: Brian's group has ❂PS 4 and have completed part III of Tour I, and not started on Tour II. They can decide to play either Outpost D-34 has fallen or Respond to S.O.S.

Example 2: Allan's group has ❂PS 2 and have completed part II of Tour I, and not started on Tour II. Since they do not fulfil the ❂PS requirement for Tour II, they may only play Counterattack.

0: Welcome to Outpost D-34
This is an introduction mission.

Introduction: Escorting the Decimator,p21

1: Aftermath of Hoth

Part II: Defend Outpost D-34

Part III: Counterattack

Part IV: Outpost D-34 has fallen

Part V: Destroy the Defenses

Part VI: Destroy the Transport

Part III: Rescue War Refugees

Part IV: Capture Enemies

Part V: Guard the Resupply

Mission Briefing:

"Our sector has recently been assigned a VT-49 Decimator, that may become a great addition to our operations. The lieutenant has boasted the accuracy of his gunnery teams on several occasions. The Commander wants proof of this before she can assign the ship and the crew to other duties. Your mission is to escort the Decimator to a nearby asteroid field and protect it while the gunnery team tests its skills against the rebel insurgents in this area. Make sure to stay away from the Decimators fire, as they are eager to show their skills.

For this mission Flight Group Alpha will be flying TIE Fighters."

Your First Mission:
This mission is only intended for a group of new players to familiar oneself with flying TIE Fighters at PS 1. All enemy fighters have higher PS than themselves. If possible, soften up the fighters to let the Decimator finish them off and make sure to stay out of enemy fire.
Keep track of each ship that the Decimator manage to cause damage to. If it hits more than half of the enemy ships you have completed one of the primary mission objectives.
The Decimator can take a lot of damage, but has no Defense die. A good idea might be to use the Protect Action to help it.

Decimator:
The Decimator has PS 3. Decimator moves and act as the AI card and will only attack the Rebel ships.

Rebels:
All Rebel Ships has Strike AI against the Decimator and will not fire against the TIE Fighters unless they cannot fire on the Decimator.

Remember: The Imperials have the Initiative!

Depending on PS during this mission, there will be the following order of taking maneuvers:
1. Any Imperial Pilots with PS 1 moves first,
2. then any Imperial Pilots with PS 2
3. Then Z-95 Headhunters (at PS 2)
4. Then X-wings (at PS 2)

Mission Briefing:

"Your squad will be out on patrol around Outpost D-34. Your mission is to inspect all cargo carrying vessel as they try to pass by our station. We are on the lookout for Rebel forces that are fleeing from the base on Hoth. You are to inspect all cargo carrying vessels that pass through this area. To accomplish this, scan each Freighter to determine what cargo the vessel has on board.
Stay alert for Rebels hidden amongst the transport convoys!

During inspections, be extra careful to avoid colliding with one of the Freighters. Your small fighter will not survive this type of collision.

For this mission Flight Group Alpha will be flying TIE Fighters*."*

Freighters without Rebels:
Following the turn after it has been scanned they are clear to continue their journey and will move 1 ⇧ each turn. These Freighters are considered Neutral. As such, the players do not get damage XP when hitting them.

Freighter containing Rebels:
The Freighter will not move or take actions during this mission. The ship is considered disabled if it has 1-3 Hull remaining. The players only get XP for damaging this ship after it has been identified!

Mugaari Forces (Roe and Escro groups)
These squads are of the Light Scyk variant. These ships has PS 1, as stated on the AI card.

If the Lulsa crosses the edge of the map during it's movement phase, the players may only target the aft portion of the ship during that turn. If the Lulsla is not destroyed by the end of that turn, it is considered to have escaped and the players fail the mission.

If the Transport is destroyed
If the Lulsla is destroyed, all rebel ships will attempt to leave the map. Immediately assign a Flee token to each enemy ship on the board. The mission ends when all rebels ships have either fled or are destroyed.

Mission Briefing:

"The Sepan peoples have been torn apart by civil war for generations. Each of the rival factions (Dimok and Ripoblus) is guilty of committing atrocities against each other. Admiral Harkov has been given the task of bringing an end to this civil war.

We have received a distress signal from a Ripoblus convoy under attack by Dimok marauders. Your objective is to save as much of the convoy as possible. This will be accomplished by destroying enough of the attacking Dimoks to force the rest to withdraw. The survivors will report back to their leaders. They will realize the Empire means to end this war.

For this mission Flight Group Alpha will be flying TIE Fighters.

Make sure to inspect the Freighters, as we have suspicions that they may contain illegal goods."

Your squad will deploy to destroy one of the Firesprays as an example to the rest of them. The loss should convince the Ripoblus to break off their attack. If not, continue your assault. We are not seeking complete destruction of the attackers. We merely want to force a withdrawal.
